Paul Taylor, the Director of the Mount St. Helens Creation Center, speaks on The Six Days of Genesis. This talk is designed to fit with the book of the same title, and is an exposition of Genesis chapters 1 and 2, showing a biblical and exegetical approach to the issue of origins.

Paul was born and grew up near Manchester, England. He studied piano at Chetham's School of Music, but read Chemistry at the University of Nottingham. Paul taught Chemistry, Physics and Science in government ("public") schools in England and Wales for 18 years, eventually becoming a Head of Science, with a Masters in Science Education and Management from the University of Cardiff.

Paul was saved at the age of 15. He came across creationist literature in his late teens, and quickly became involved in speaking and writing on the subject of creation and evolution, Genesis and apologetics. Since 2005, he has been a full-time creation speaker, having worked for Answers in Genesis (UK/Europe) and Creation Today. He and his wife are the Directors of the Mount St Helens Creation Center. Paul is married to Geri, and they have five children between them.

Refreshments, books, DVDs, and pamphlets will be at the resource tables afterwards.
